ST. LOUIS, Aug. 17, 2016 /PRNewswire/ -- Can you tell the difference between an aphid and an armyworm? How about diagnosing that circular brown patch in your lawn? Now homeowners can get these answers more easily than ever with the newly enhanced Spectracide® website and accompanying Bug & Weed Identifier app. These digital tools are designed as go-to resources for people researching pest and weed problems, providing easy-to-use tools to match pests with pictures on the site and expert advice to guide them to the best solutions for their problems.

The streamlined Spectracide website is designed to simplify the home pest control category for consumers by giving them expert advice at their fingertips – wherever and whenever they need it. The updated website Solutions Center offers users more bug and weed information than ever, with expert advice on topics like wood-destroying insects, lawn diseases and Japanese beetles. Homeowners can access expert advice wherever they need it with the Spectracide Bug & Weed Identifier app, a free, intuitive mobile tool that takes the guesswork out of pest problems. The app allows users to search databases of insect, weed and disease types, capture bug and weed images of your own to get professional pointers, and explore the complete portfolio of Spectracide products. It also features a retail locator and provides product information and how-to-videos. Some of the app's newest features also include:
